

CHASE BRASS RETURN ROD POLICY

Dear Customer,

Chase Brass and Copper Company, LLC. Returned Rod Policy implemented on October 1, 2015, is outlined below.

REASON FOR ROD RETURNS:

- 1). Customer complaint due to quality problem (e.g. bent/bowed, inclusion, wrong size, Chase administrative error, etc.). Confirmation of the quality problem must be completed and agreed upon by Chase (complaint justification verified). In such cases, full credit will be issued.
- 2). Credit and restocking purposes (e.g. return of excess stock, customer order error, etc.). Must receive authorization from Chase Brass Sales Department.
- 3). Return rod process:
 - A Return Authorization Number (RMA) MUST be issued by the Chase Brass Sales Department before rod can be returned.
 - The customer MUST reference the RMA number on all return paperwork.
 - Unless authorized by Chase, all returned rod is automatically assumed to be of scrap quality and upon receipt, will be awarded current published scrap price or current free market value.
 - Return rod will be inspected for restocking at the mill's discretion upon receipt of material.
 - Restocking parameters based on: Condition of Material, Size of Product, Quantity Returned, and Age of Product (over 90 days cannot be restocked).
 - Material deemed not to be of restock quality will be scrapped and credit handled by Chase Brass Sales Department accordingly.
 - In the event material is determined to be suitable for restocking, credit will be processed according to Chase's restocking policy.
 - Current re-stocking charge is $0.20/lb. and applicable freight charges associated with the return will be billed to customer accordingly.

Please note rod that is returned without the assigned RMA number OR paperwork that does not reference an RMA number will be considered SCRAP material and scrap credit issued accordingly.

Please feel free to contact your Regional Sales Manager or Customer Account Specialist if you have any additional questions.
